Haliburton Red Wolves Brandon's lasting legacy

Yvette Brauer, who is the current Red Wolves team coordinator, said a lot of credit goes to Linda for how she made a positive impact in the lives of people like her son, Trevor, who benefited socially and physically being a Red Wolves active member.

The Brauers first moved here from Toronto in 2005. At first Trevor had no interest in joining the Red Wolves after his experience of attending a mainstream school where he was treated like everyone else.

However, there wasn't much to do here socially, so Trevor warmed to the idea and joined the bowling team. He soon discovered the warm atmosphere and inclusive quality created by Linda's leadership was the best place to make friends.

"That was a good introduction for Trevor to make new friends and still be fit. From that, Trevor got to go to provincial games for bowling ... he represented the Red Wolves for golf, he want to provincial games," she said. His experience also includes competing at the nationals held in P.E.I.

"What started with Linda has given opportunities for a number of athletes to travel provincially, nationally. And it all started with Linda and her vision to have Special Olympics come to the Highlands, so if she didn't do that we wouldn't be where we are today," she said.

In hindsight, it was an important decision for them in building a connection to the area built on the opportunity for social and physical growth.

Yvette said the Special Olympics organization is supportive, but money is not always available and so for programs to operate it took the support of its community and needed leadership of someone like Linda to facilitate the fundraisers and ensure the commitment of sponsors related to operating an athletic program on a shoestring budget to not just hold activities, but pay for uniforms, and to cover travel competitions.

Linda wrote in an email about the key fundraiser for the Red Wolves which was the Law Enforcement's Annual "Flame of Hope" Torch Run. It provided significant opportunities for important funds to be raised to not just help offset the program costs, but also to spread added awareness about Ontario Special Olympic athletes throughout the county.

Trevor isn't the only beneficiary with a story to share.

Parents Duane and Tracey Pratt are grateful to Linda for the opportunity that enabled their daughter, Skylar to expand her world.

"By creating the Haliburton Red Wolves, Linda provided a place for our daughter where she felt comfortable and accepted around her peers; not something that comes easily to Sky, [who has] autism. Skylar has thrived in this environment, which has awarded her opportunities she would not have had otherwse," they wrote in a letter of support submitted to the Hall of Fame.

Skylar started with the Wolves at the age of 13 back in 2005. She looked forward every week to bowling, seeing her friends and her coach, Linda. Her time with the bowling team included the "once in a lifetime experience" of getting to represent the area with her team at the provincials in 2016, where they qualified to compete at the nationals held in P.E.I. in 2018. She continues to be an active member participating in not just bowling, but also curling, softball, golf and shuffleboard.

From the letter, the parents wrote the team has not only given her "a source of physical activity and sportsmanship, but also a place where she has made very good friends. Our family can't thank Linda enough for starting our chapter of Special Olympics. It has enriched our daughter's life more than we can express. We were very happy to learn of her nomination and can't imagine anyone more worthy than she for this honour."

Not to take away from Brandon's efforts, but the team was also sustained by the support of its volunteers, who were often parents, or guardians, including community helpers that received training to coach, assist and fundraise, she said.

"Other than that, the whole thing, where we are today it all started with Linda. We wouldn't be where we are today if it didn't start with Linda," she said.

Although Linda left the Red Wolves to return to attend school in 2007, she remained in touch with the athletes, Yvette said.

There is a lasting legacy related to starting a team that has grown to something so much bigger than ever imagined.

"It is heartening to know that for more than the past decade the Haliburton Red Wolves, under the leadership of Yvette Brauer, who is the Coordinator of the Haliburton District Community of Special Olympics, expanded the Red Wolves team to include 35 registered athletes, 32 volunteers, and sport options that include bowling, curling, golf, shuffleboard and softball. Tremendous enriching team development and advancement has taken place since the building of the Red Wolves team's foundation in 1997," she wrote. "For that, I am incredibly grateful to have played a part in this significant sport heritage experience! The biggest 'thank you' to everyone who has served on the Haliburton Sports Hall of Fame committees including all those who in any way contributed to my induction."

Students learn to be allies aware of justice, equity, diversity, inclusion

SUE TIFFIN
County Life Staff

A group of students sitting in a classroom became part of an activity resulting in a powerful learning opportunity without even leaving their chairs.

The Haliburton Highlands Secondary School students were instructed to not move from where they sat, while a bucket was placed at the front of the room. Though all sitting at different angles, near and far from the bucket, the students were asked to throw a ball of paper toward it – if they got the ball of paper into the bucket, they scored a point.

"Obviously, students at the front of the room have the advantage, because they are closer," said Jenn Mills, HHSS vice-principal who led the activity. "Great discussion around if it's fair. What would make it more fair? How did you feel about where you were sitting for this activity? How does this relate to privilege and oppression? How can we make levels of privilege more equitable?"

The activity was part of an 18-module program called the J.E.D.I. Program, developed by a team of educators, to help both staff and students at HHSS have the chance to learn more and have greater awareness about justice, equity, diversity and inclusion and vocabulary, topics and issues related to those topics that affect their world today.

"We all have more to learn," said Mills. "I know I gained knowledge myself while researching and going through these modules."

The 'ally T-shirt,' which students are able to get once they have completed the J.E.D.I. program modules and explained how they are an ally was designed by Jocelyn Chumbley and April Kovacs with help from the students in HHSS art classes. /Submitted

The program's mission statement reads: "Justice. Equity. Diversity. Inclusion. [J.E.D.I] learning modules are about creating positive change in our world by increasing awareness and acting to reduce factors that impinge on equal opportunities for everyone regardless of gender, race, class, ability, religion, sexual orientation, identity or circumstance. We aim to create and foster a positive school environment in which each person's unique set of ideas, beliefs, and skills are valued."

"This isn't separate from the curriculum we are teaching," said Mills. "In fact, Ontario's Equity and Inclusion Strategy document, released over a decade ago - states that classrooms need to be inclusive and students should be able to see themselves in what we teach. By taking this J.E.D.I. journey together, we are laying the groundwork for this to happen now and in the future because we will know the correct vocabulary, have broader views on issues and injustices beyond what we see everyday. Without this knowledge it's hard to embed these issues into the curriculum since some students wouldn't have the background information on certain issues/topics to give them a context to start with."

HHSS educators Karen Gervais, Christine Carr and Amy Klose, alongside some fellow educators, developed the J.E.D.I. program modules to be used by their colleagues during class.

"They included topics that would be significant to students and allowed them to broaden their knowledge base allowing them to see other perspectives," said Mills. "Some of the topics included were race, bias, ethnicity, Indigenous culture, stereotypes, gender, discrimination, human rights, and identity. Our teachers facilitated these lessons through discussions, interactive activities, reflections, powerful and thought-provoking videos, and world events."

Some teachers, she said, made connections between what they were teaching, and the J.E.D.I. lessons.

"For example Ms. Andress - who was supporting the Grade 10 physics class - did some research into science, technology and race," said Mills. "She discovered that automatic sensors for soap or sanitizers don't all recognize coloured skin. This linked into discussion around why and who was creating the technology and doing the testing. If people with coloured skin were involved then perhaps this injustice could have been avoided."

When HHSS staff and students moved to online learning as a result of pandemic lockdowns in the province, challenges associated with the virtual setting made implementing the modules more difficult – engagement was lower than the staff had hoped, with about half of the students participating on a regular basis, but those who did participate offered positive feedback on the learning and opportunity.

The benefits of the program are essential.

New HHSS J.E.D.I. program led to discussion around the dinner table

"We hope to create a community of allies," said Mills. "Students who aren't afraid to stand up for others or themselves if they see injustices happening. Students who are knowledgeable about world issues and societal norms. Students who feel comfortable to be themselves because they have the support of others around them. Students who can leave our school and feel comfortable having conversations about global issues because they have the background knowledge. There are so many things we hope will come of our journey we have just started."

Feedback about the program was "overwhelmingly positive for the most part," said Mills, with families, teachers and students responding to a questionnaire noting the program helped students feel more comfortable having discussions and asking questions about "things we don't know about and should," appreciate "how we were all able to learn a lot and be more conscious about what is going on around us," and learn "about all of the different parts of our identity and what makes us who we are." Parents said the program created discussion around the dinner table that provoked deeper thinking, and that the students were better able to understand themselves and "what they need and want to feel a sense of belonging and connection to others."

Not all of the feedback was positive, said Mills, and that was important to hear, too. Some parents asked questions about the program and why it was being offered, though Mills said once it was explained further the families were "receptive and appreciative."

"Some people mentioned that this type of knowledge was not needed because we live in a small town, especially for the students who are not leaving," said Mills. "Our response is such that students from every ability level, career path, and background can benefit from knowing more about the world around us including inclusion and equity topics. Even though our 'small town' might look homogeneous it is not. Just because people can't 'see' differences all around them doesn't mean they aren't there. People come from all different backgrounds, economic status, identities, gender, race, religions, Indigenous cultures, and so much more. If we don't learn about differences and become knowledgeable, global citizens then we could perpetuate stereotypes, bias and discrimination without realizing it. The more knowledge you can take in, the more informed your decisions and views can be. If topics make you uncomfortable, then let's be OK with discomfort and decide that maybe we need to learn more about it so that it doesn't make us uncomfortable."

Mills said some feedback suggested the learning was "political," and that students could do their own research on it if they wanted to know more. She said the program was about knowing more, and that rather than forcing opinions, educators were helping to increase awareness.

"I keep coming back to the quote from Maya Angelou - 'Do the best you can until you know better. Then when you know better, do better.' Our job as educators is to push everyone's thinking, so that's what we do. Provide opportunities for students to learn, and they can do with that knowledge however they decide."

"Many of our students, families and staff recognize the importance of this learning journey," she said. "However we won't ignore any of the criticism or negativity that came about - it tells us that we have more work to do and a long way to go. We will use the momentum that these J.E.D.I. modules created to continue to educate, adapt and make our school a more positive inclusive place for everyone."

Students who participated in the program can receive an 'ally T-shirt,' designed by Jocelyn Chumbley and April Kovacs with help from students enrolled in art courses. The logo for the certificate of completion that students receive was designed by student Colleen Petric.

"We were pleased with the outcome so far, however we know that we still have lots of work to do," said Mills. "This is just the start of our journey. We are grateful for the teachers who facilitated and the students who participated online in this J.E.D.I. journey in this unprecedented time."

Feedback from students and staff on how the program might be improved will be considered and acted on.

"This will help us move forward and develop more opportunities for students, staff and our communities to become more aware, knowledgeable and stronger allies," said Mills.

All vaxxed up and somewhere to go

Maybelle's Fireside stories

WOULDN'T YOU know, just in time for Ontario's Stage 1 reopening, ol' Maybelle is all vaxxed up with places to go. Oh, yes, I got my second shot five days ago and so did my good friends: Vilma Yucch, Stanley Penelope McBottom (her significant smother), Beanpole Starkman, Twindle Mumbly and Sybil Beaucannon Hughes. Vilma and Stanley (the babies of the group) are all vaxxed, too, because they're front-line workers, don'tcha know. Why, I'm over the moon giddy and feeling peachy keen.

Now we can hug, flap our lips over a cuppa and a burger at a Lake WhaddayathinkImean diner, on the patio of course, knock some tennis balls around, and sit out back of my cottage under the stars and dream out loud, like old times.

We're still masked up in public, of course, and I'm thinkin' it will probably stay that way for a long time. And ol' Maybelle is just fine about it. Look at the good it did this past winter. You never even heard about anybody getting the flu. Wearing a mask kept us all from coughing and sneezing on each other. And that used to be a huge bee in my bonnet…when folks with bad colds would go out in public and share their germs like candies. Some people still think masks don't do any good. But, I say… posh! Of course they do!

Vilma is starting up her yoga classes in the park again. She teaches them, don'tcha know. And she's oh so clever. Why that girl can twist herself in a pretzel, do the downward facing dog, and pop back out like a piece of bread in a broken toaster. C'est la vie, Zoom … bonjour green grass, blue skies, real people and fresh country air!

Now, ol' Maybelle can go visit my 94-year-old friend, Ruby, and not worry about it. I've so missed her. And soon I can get my fuzzy mop of curls coiffed, too. I'd take a pair of scissors to it but last time I did that I ended up looking like a human doily.

We're all going to go tubing down the Gull River in Minden, don'tcha know, one of our favourite summer-time activities. Officer McB will tie his tube to Vilma's … lovebirds that they are. Sybil will stay ashore and pick us all up at the end of our one-and-a-half hour float to downtown Minden. She doesn't mind. Especially now that the Rivercone's new owners, Ben and Monica, are offering up super juicy burgers, fresh croissants made onsite daily, and speciality coffees among other treats. Give her a yummy meal and a great book and she's happy, especially if it's written by Kurt Vonnegut.

And when ol' Maybelle is happy, Bogart my pet bear is happy. According to him, I can get cranky when I'm inside for too long. And being a thoughtful, caring bear, he is thrilled that the lock has been taken off of this lockdown so that his surrogate "Mama" can be her happy jovial super crusty self again.

Happy Stage 1, everybody!

Maybelle's Fireside Stories is written by Jerelyn Craden. Jerelyn's books, "Vessie Flamingo Outshining the Moon," and "Maybelle's Cure for What Ails You" are available at amazon.com.

Top 10 things your dog thinks about when retrieving things

STEVE GALEA
Humour Columnist

LIKE MOST dogs, mine loves to retrieve things. I love this but every now and again I wonder what they are thinking at the time. Here are my top 10 guesses.

1. Hey! Stop littering!
2. Dad always said I should have a trade to fall back on.
3. I don't know why my human likes this game so much.
4. Time to play into the age-old stereotype.
5. This is the only thing that separates us from the cats.
6. If he keeps throwing them farther, I'm asking for a raise.
7. Why would anyone want to get rid of this perfectly serviceable retrieving dummy?
8. I wish I could quit this.
9. It's either this or roll over.
10. The things I do for a scratch behind the ears.

Northern inflections

To that bird which still sings when final morning showers stop
I think it's a robin, he chortles so
The mist gives way to sudden snow
But mostly rain which swiftly kills each daring flake
As if to shame this strange mistake
Imagining snow's still owed a space where robins hop

Since now we're May, when all the neon leaves chime in
As if, like songbirds, each tree has lung and voice
And choir-gown of high-green choice
In palette sparks, each different shock-tint hue and shade

Until July halts such singularity, and one hard classic forest green is made Chorus will hum tenor then, through to September, next of kin

No human system runs the ancient time clock here
Snow visits when the air is willing
Even June nights can send us chilling
To our wood-stoves, to our handmade quilts
Although sweet raindrop robin outside lilts
His heart out, that prophet song's my secret summer seer

New chapter for historic Haliburton building

DARREN LUM
County Life Staff

Local artist Tiffany Howe stands in front of her studio, How(e) Creative. Although the studio will not be open with regular hours and operate as a full time business, Howe has plans to include the community by holding art workshops, hosting showings and public events on certain weekends. For more info or to purchase, DM her, message her on Facebook (Tiffany Howe Creative) or call/text 705-457-6919. For more information see Howe's website: howecreative.ca. / DARREN LUM Staff

Outside what was once Banks' General Store on Pine Avenue in Haliburton village, local multidisciplinary, award-winning artist Tiffany Howe is lit by the afternoon sun and stands for a photo, illuminating the warm feelings she holds in her heart for the building that she has known all her life.

It's telling for the homegrown artist that graduated from Haliburton Highlands Secondary School in 2003, who has transformed her rental unit within the historical landmark that dates back to the start of the town into what she is calli ng the How(e) Creative studio where local creations are showcased in the near 12-foot window fronts.

Officially opened April 17, the new studio maintains an air of the past with its architectural cues from when it was the Irwin Store managed by Frederick Freeman in 1881, intermingled with the contemporary flair Howe has brought with splashes of whimsy from the art work and collectibles she has within the open space, which is inspired by her "seeing the magic in the world."

Howe, who is the curator at the Ethel Curry Gallery in Haliburton, said how this studio came to be was "serendipitous."

"I was just looking for an apartment to rent and I was supposed to be renting a different unit in this building and it ended up I got to have this space, so it was just absolutely ideal. As soon as I got in here [I told myself], oh, I have to do something with this so that I can bring the community in and make a creative space out of it," she said.

With ever-changing restrictions related to provincial safety regulations, hosting events has been put on hold for now. However, that hasn't stopped Howe from dreaming about potential ideas for the location, whether it's hosting art workshops such as life drawing sessions, or showings and public events on the weekends.

The idea to open the space up to the public is part of an effort to bring life to the building that she used to frequent as a child with her sister and mother from her home down the road.

"When I was a kid I grew up down the road from here. This was Banks' General Store and my mom would come here when she needed a couple of things, so my sister would get to get some penny candies and a nutty cone, comic books and stuff," she said, laughing. "So it was that and I know a lot of people that live in this neighbourhood felt this store was a staple to them. Then after that, when it became the Wild Oats Café, I knew the owners and performed at the open mic nights they had here and that carried on to the next owners ... Then when Nicola owned it and had the Heritage House Café, I would come here and plan Newfanglers Arts Festival [as co-creator and director] and have business meetings with people. So I feel like I've been connected to this building for my whole life and I know so many other people are as well. There's a lot of memories that people have here," she said. "I don't know why, but I do just feel compelled to want to include people in the continuing story of this place, evolving and changing."

Howe says she always knew she would grow up to become an artist. When she was just 16, her first job was working for local stain glass artist, Tom Green.

After high school, she attended Sheridan College, studying textiles and ceramics for a year for the Art Fundamentals and Craft and Design

Art 'something that can be appreciated by everyone'

Her art background and education includes a variety of learning methods from the formal, which includes Sheridan and numerous classes at the Haliburton School of Art + Design, to hands-on experience with area artists, including her artistic peers, and through her own artistic journey.

From her personal journey as an artist and experience working at the Ethel Curry Gallery, and her own studio, she believes in the importance of art being something that can be appreciated by everyone.

"It's really been important to me to help people feel like the arts world can be inclusive and friendly. And you don't need to understand anything about art to appreciate it," she said. "A lot of people are really self-conscious to ask questions, or feel like they're not allowed to come in and I think with this space – this is the first space of this calibre that I've ever worked in and been ... it's been really liberating for me to be like: I make all the rules and I can do whatever I want. I kind of want to share that idea with people. Of course when you're learning art there are rules. It's important to learn the rules, but it's also good to know that art is for anybody and art is what you decide it is. It's important for me to share a little bit of a laid back attitude for appreciating and making art with people."

The poetic quality to the circular nature of her journey from how her space in the building she valued as a child has now fallen to her for its stewardship for its next chapter isn't lost on Howe. However, this scenario wasn't ever a consideration during her relationship with the building, which has rooted itself forever in her heart.

"Oh, no. Not in the slightest. It still surprises me almost daily. I walk through here, especially at night when the light is shining through the great big windows and everything silhouettes you feel the grandness of the space. Almost more when it's the subtle light. I walk through and think to myself: Oh, my god. I get to live here," she said.

For more info or to purchase, DM her, message her on Facebook (Tiffany Howe Creative) or call/text 705-457-6919. For more information see Howe's website: howecreative.ca

IF YOU CAN'T SEE CHANGE, IS IT REALLY HAPPENING?

Do you ever wonder where all the minnows went? And whatever happened to all the crayfish that used to live in our streams and rivers? When change happens so slowly that we don't even notice it, it's known as 'change blindness' – and that's exactly what's happening in our County's lakes right now.

Damaging changes to our shorelines are affecting the health of our lakes. But seeing change is the first step in making a difference.

Taking care of our County's beautiful lakes takes all of us. Be sure you know the full facts and discover the difference you can make.

When we protect our lakes, we protect the priceless memories yet to be made.

From the Heart of Haliburton Cookbook will help school in India

DARREN LUM

County Life Staff

There is a genuine sweetness to the From the Heart of Haliburton Cookbook that can't be denied, and it's down to more than just the dessert recipes.

Created by the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School Interact Club in partnership with parent club Rotary Club of Haliburton and the club for young adults, the Rotaract Club, the spiral-bound cookbook has multiple purposes. While serving to unite the community in an effort to collect recipes that have long warmed the hearts and bellies of county residents, the cookbook is also a fundraising initiative, with proceeds raised to benefit the Mahatma Gandhi Sishu Siksha Sadan School in rural India, south of Kolkata. The Haliburton Rotary Club has had a relationship with the school for almost 15 years.

Profits from the sale of the 84-recipe cookbook will help the school in India purchase basic items such as desks and chairs. There is a hope to expand the relationship with the school to include HHSS for greater school-to-school interactions.

Logan Heaven, the Interact member responsible for communications on the cookbook project said, "It's been a great success so far and we're just proud of what we've created."

Thus far there have been 70 pre-orders from the 100 about-to-be printed copies for the $20 book, which spans the range of recipes from appetizers and sides to entrees and desserts. There is an eclectic list that includes Chinese fried rice, chickpea burgers, Pad Thai, bread, pesto and date squares.

Heaven said originally the plan was to print only 50 copies before pre-orders came in and, if there was interest for more, another run of copies printed. He added the book took two months to complete, which included planning and execution.

The cover of the design was created by members of the Rotaract Club, while the interior page layout was completed by the Interact Club in consultation with members of Rotary and Rotaract, Logan said.

The Interact Club has taken on several initiatives to help the community since their launch, such as during Halloween when it organized the We Care Hunger event, which included the collection of non-perishables for residents in need within the community.

It includes president Emma Mitchell, vice-president Daniella Meraw, secretary, Megan Klose, and members Jessica Lee and Sophie Longo.

Logan said his favourite recipe is the one from his family, which he's had the pleasure of knowing all his life and is not just close to his heart, but donated by his grandmother, Logan's Famous Chocolate Sauce.

Throughout his life it was a sauce that adorned many desserts, but primarily ice cream, he said.

He adds cooking and those sorts of activities have been a big part of helping him get through the pandemic.

"I know I have tried to pick up some cooking and I was never the best at cooking, but at least it let me get out there and try," he said. "It marks a time we all worked together as a community and as a population to help and get through the pandemic. I think it very much does mark an era in time for us."

Frog Hollow integrated art experience makes its grand debut in the Highlands

Frog Hollow Integrated Art Experience is presenting its new concept of integrating the arts in nature and wellness settings to the public at a grand opening reception on July 2, from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. at Whirling Wisdom Creations Art Studio. The event will be filmed.

"As artists we are dedicated to exhibit meaningful art practices and works that encompass the sacredness in inspired manifestations, freedom of expression, inner rhythms and bring these dimensions into everyday sustainable living," said Biljana Banchotova, of Whirling Wisdom Creations Art Studio. "We invite the public to explore artist studios in nature settings and be inspired by experiencing the magic of visual arts against the backdrop of natural beauty in the Ontario wilds."

In the 19th century, Frog Hollow was a settlement in Highlands East, known for its beautiful landscapes and sacred mineral trails. Now, Banchotova has joined forces with Darlene Dove, of Earthdance Studio, and Shawn Arscott, of Eagle Eye Productions, to bring a brand new art experience to the community.

The trio are aiming to bring together artists from all across Ontario in an effort to put on diverse displays at open houses throughout the summer.

The opening reception will take place at Whirling Wisdom Creations Art Studio at 18378 Highway 118 in Tory Hill on July 2. The tour will continue the first weekend from May to October, Saturdays and Sundays from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. this year and in the following years.

The group has an open call to artists that would like to participate in this exciting new idea of presenting their art in integrated landscapes. Please visit our website at froghollowarttour.com for further details and directions or email us at froghollow118@gmail.com.

Hwy 121 to become a county road in '98

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Six months after giving Haliburton County the ownership of 100 km of highways, the provincial government is adding even more kilometres to the county roads system.

Starting January 1, Highway 121 between Haliburton and Minden will become County Road 121.

Whether it agrees or disagrees, it seems there's little county council can do about it. Since municipal governments are a creation of the province, the province "can give you whatever they want to give you," says county roads engineer Les Shepherd.

"It could be bad if the bridges are a county responsibility," says Warden Murray Fearrey. The bridges on the highway are getting old, and would cost much more to fix than the $2-million the province is giving to the county in exchange for the change in ownership.

Come January, the 24-kilometre stretch between Minden and Haliburton will be the busiest in the county's road system.

The latest available Ministry of Transportation statistics, for 1993, show the average daily car count for the year was 2,600 cars from Minden to a point a third of the way towards Haliburton, and 3,150 cars for the rest of the two-thirds. In summer, those numbers jump to 3,350 and 4,050.

"I am a little bit surprised" at how high the counts are, Shepherd says. The only comparable stretch of road for the county is the one kilometre between Hwy 121 in Haliburton and the Haliburton Hospital, which sees 2,000 vehicles a day.

GRADUATION '97

It was a time of fondly looking backat the past, and excitedly thinking of what was to come in the future when Grade 8 students across the county graduated last week. High school upgrade costs rise to $6-M

by PETER DOWNS
Staff Reporter

The projected cost of upgrading Haliburton's high school has jumped "significantly" to nearly $6-million, in part because of a building freeze imposed by the province, say board officials.

The cost of construction and buying building materials went up during the Ministry of Education's one-year moratorium on new school construction, which was lifted in the spring, said superintendent of business administration, Jim Bradley.

When the expansion proposal first went to the drawing board more than two years ago, the board's architect estimated it would cost about $4.75-million.

That price was based on estimates of $85 to $90 per square foot to build the addition and carry out renovations. At the time the construction industry was hurting so many companies were willing to bend on their prices, said Bradley.

But today — after more than a year on the shelf because of the building freeze — estimated construction costs for the high school work are estimated at about $100 per square foot.

"I guess I get a little frustrated with the Ministry saying they want to save money. But the cost of this project has grown significantly" since the board first submitted it for approval, said education director Brad Saunders.

However, the construction delay can't be blamed solely for the increased price-tag.

In February, a majority of trustees voted to bump up the original $4.75-million expansion proposal by adding a $400,000 theatre and lecture hall.

Trustees who supported the additional work feared they may not get another chance to see the theatre built before the board is dismantled in January.

Last week members of the board's management committee reviewed tenders submitted by three construction firms bidding on the upgrade project.

The lowest bid came from World Cup paddlers need a place to park their kayaks

The entire world will be converging on Horseshoe Lake this summer – or at the very least, the world's best white water kayakers.

For the first time, the Minden Wild Water Preserve will host the fifth and final event in this year's World Cup circuit. That means the actual cups will be presented on the shores of the Gull River.

CBC television sports has said it will be there, adding to the prestige of the event. The Minden site is often said to be the world's best natural white water site.

Several of the competitors were at the Atlanta Olympics so "this is your chance to hobnob with the Olympians," says organizer Craig Peabody, who is looking for people who are willing to open their homes or cottages to the athletes.

The event takes place over the August civic weekend, August 1 to 3, and athletes will arrive a couple of days before that. The organizing committee is asking local residents and cottagers, especially those near the Preserve, to host one or several of the athletes. While the accommodation is expected to be free of charge, the athletes
